OBSESSIVE COMPULSIVE HOARDER

In a pretty English village lives the infamous Mr. Richard Wallace, who is arguably Britain’s most extreme hoarder. His house has become a death trap. The three bedroom bungalow and separate double garage are stuffed from floor to ceiling with newspapers and other household items. The house is so packed that he has to crawl over mountains of papers and magazines simply to move from room to room. It takes 40 minutes to get to his front door from the chair he eats and sleeps in. A year later, things are coming to a head as the picturesque village is competing to win Britain in Bloom and Richard’s home is once again the source of contention. But with the hoarding now affecting his ability to function, Richard is entrenched to the point where his health is suffering, his safety is increasingly at risk and he is living in a physical and mental prison. Richard decides to seek help and grants documentary access into his over-stuffed home where no one else has ventured.

BREATHLESS BRIDE: DYING TO LIVE

The brave story of a Cystic Fibrosis sufferer as she awaits a double lung transplant. Kirstie Mills has always known that her life would be short. Born with Cystic Fibrosis, she was put onto the transplant waiting list in March 2011 and told that without new lungs, she could be dead within 6 months. As her health rapidly declined, Kirstie had to decide whether to rest and wait for the lung transplant or to live her life, however long it would last. This film follows Kirstie’s extraordinary experience of living on the transplant waiting list and the realities of constant pain and endless medication. During her journey, Kirstie is rushed to hospital just three days before the wedding- will she make it down the aisle? And, more importantly, will she get the transplant she so desperately needs?
