SILVER RUSH 3-part special premieres on Sunday, February 24 at 8PM ET/PT followed by new episodes at 9PM ET/PT and 10PM ET/PT

8PM ET/PT – The Hunt for Gairsoppa's Treasure: Odyssey Marine Exploration, the world's best-known deep-sea recovery team, is at it again. In 2007, they hit the jackpot with the discovery of the "Black Swan," a Colonial-era site with 17 tons of silver and gold. But after a five-year legal battle, they had to turn it over to Spain. Narrated by Mike Rowe, SILVER RUSH follows the team as they set out on their most audacious operation yet -- locate and excavate three shipwrecks worth as much as a billion dollars all in one summer. In the first episode, the team finds several silver ingots indicating that they may be getting close to locating the 48 tons of silver supposedly on board. But a required crew change forces them to leave the site of the SS Gairsoppa before they can find it.

9PM ET/PT – Curse of the Mantola: Odyssey's Andrew Craig and the team head back to the site of the SS Gairsoppa in search of more treasure. But a sudden storm forces a change of plan and they must reroute to a second wreck: the SS Mantola, a wreck that may hold 660,000 ounces of silver. The team discovers an ingot and it appears that they've struck silver again. However, when tested to see whether it is actually silver, the team gets an answer that will change their entire summer plan.

10PM ET/PT – Odyssey's Victory: In the final episode, the Odyssey guys double down on their two remaining shipwrecks. Seabed worker Andrew Craig and team finally recover their first million from the SS Gairsoppa. But can they find the mother lode before bad weather shuts them down for the year? Simultaneously, the team sets sail for the HMS Victory and its reputed billion dollars in gold. She's a British naval legend, but a gruesome discovery sets the team back. Will this be the final blow to Odyssey's summer of silver?
