“OPRAH: WHERE ARE THEY NOW?” (60 Minutes)

Season Premiere - Tuesday, March 19 (10 p.m.-11 p.m. ET/PT)

Their stories made headlines across America. “Oprah: Where Are They Now?” tracks down memorable “Oprah” show guests who made you laugh...and made you cry. Find out where they are now, plus see what happened to some of the biggest newsmakers of all time and how their lives changed after sudden fame and notoriety turned their worlds upside down. Upcoming episodes feature Dennis Rodman, “Octomom” Nadya Suleman, Gennifer Flowers, Sinbad, Marion Jones and Candace Bushnell.

(P) Tuesday, March 19 (10 p.m.-11 p.m. ET/PT) Episode: Dennis Rodman, Gennifer Flowers & Nadya Suleman

Dennis Rodman was one of the most controversial and flamboyant superstars of the NBA. In the nineties, the notorious 6'8" professional basketball player was the number one rebounder on the court, but he was equally known for his dyed hair, piercings, tattoos and press-grabbing antics on and off the court. It's been 16 years since Rodman's appearance on the “Oprah” show. Now, Rodman reveals what his life is like since his days of dominating the spotlight, including his most surprising recent project: writing a children's book. Then, in 1992, former Arkansas TV reporter Gennifer Flowers was one of the first women to come forward about a political sex scandal. It's been 21 years since and at her home near New Orleans, Flowers talks about what she thinks men in politics today can learn from her story. Also, a medical first in 2009 made news around the world when Nadya Suleman, better known as Octomom, already a mom of six, gave birth to the world's longest surviving octuplets. Overnight, Suleman became the most controversial and scrutinized mom in America. Now the octuplets are four years old and Suleman reveals why she agreed to star in an adult movie and why she was forced to move into a new home.

(P) Tuesday, March 26 (10 p.m.-11 p.m. ET/PT) Episode: Sinbad, Disgraced Olympian Marion Jones & Candace Bushnell

Sinbad rose to fame in the early nineties as a stand-up comedian and actor most well-known as the loveable character coach Walter Oakes on the hit TV series “A Different World” and his popular HBO comedy specials. After 14 “Oprah” show appearances, Sinbad is back talking about his new band, family, and the greatest lessons he's learned over the past three decades. Then, Olympic runner Marion Jones was once hailed as the fastest woman in the world and a hero to millions until she was found guilty of lying about using steroids and served six months in federal prison. Four years later, she talks about what life is like for her today, and how she explains to her children about her choices in life. Plus, find out what she has to say about Lance Armstrong's recent doping confession to Oprah. Then, “Sex And The City” was a cultural phenomenon created by best-selling novelist

Candace Bushnell. Sixteen years later, find out about the new novel she is working on, why she prefers to stay away from the limelight, and about her divorce to real life dancer who inspired Mikhail Baryshnikov's character in the series.
