NEW YORK (Feb. 1, 2018) – Travel Channel has greenlighted production for 14 new episodes of “Man v. Food” with host Casey Webb. So far, Season Two of the series has delivered more than 4.5 million viewers and the network is bullish on its ratings prospects for Season Three. In “Man v. Food,” which airs on Mondays at 9 p.m. ET/PT, Webb voyages throughout the country taking on outrageously decadent food challenges and meeting the people who love and create each featured dish. The series has remained a fan favorite with upscale audiences since it debuted with Webb as host last July. The third season is slated to premiere later this year.

“Food and travel are fun to me, and I really want that to come across on the show,” Webb said. “I think we broadened our spectrum of places that we’ve gone to, and we’re pushing the envelope and having more fun. I am pumped to keep the party going for a third season.”
